

PatchWork

in Perspective

Part 1

Thought Catching

The Birth of Story

This segment, part 1, is scheduled to begin on April 1, Fool's Day.

The password to access private class pages for this segment is rethink. My style is to have no real plan, but I envision this segment as an overview, digging deeper into my philosophy, style, materials and approach to creativity.

I'll look back, I'll look at where I am, and I will look forward..

I might talk about so many things. How I began. How I taught myself. Who and what inspired me. How I got sidetracked. How I kept going.

I might talk about blogging and sharing and technology and selling my work and even old age.

I will do a studio tour and talk about older work. I will show unfinished work and talk about that. I will review my basic techniques and put them into a more present context.

I will show and tell a lot. And talk about Patchwork as a concept.

And maybe we can make a little something together.

There is no sharing forum for this segment, just a community directory for those who want to be listed.